Opposition Objects to Preferential Treatment for France -Termed Moral Question

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Aug. 10
—Cancellationists and anti-cancellationists have broached a clear-cut issue at the Williamstown Institute of Politics over whether France should pay the $6,847,000,000 provided by the Mellon-Berenger wardebt agreement, or be forgiven this amount in whole or in part.

The debate opened at the round table, under Dr. Joseph S. Davis, Stanford University, where William T. Hornaday, American Defence Society, urged that the French debt should be reduced by a flat $2,000,000,000. S. L. G. Knox, consulting engineer, New York, while naming no specific sum for remission, urged easier terms for France.

In rebuttal Edward Gluck, New York lawyer, declared France had no legal claim to cancellation, that alteration in the French settlement would re-open the whole question alteration in the French settlement would re-open the whole question with other nations, and that even for the moral, as against a legal view, the United States is justified in making full debt collection. Rarely has a current issue been raised at a Wil-liamstown conference in which speakers were so sharply divided, or in which such divergent views were ressed so forcibly China and the Philippines Simultaneously with war debt discussion other groups took up the Philippine and Chinese problems. While Robert Nichels, professor at the University of Basle, Switzerland, gave an informal talk before the whole institute on "Paris."

Neither Dr. Hornaday or Mr. Knox, in the war debt conference, would agree that cancellation was a ques-in the war debt conference, would agree that cancellation was a question of "charity" to the United States' allies. They argued that American contributions of money in the world war were offset by contributions of the other allies of men and material, so that the money loans should now be canceled as a matter of justice.

Dr. Hornaday stressed America's alleged negligence in unpreparedalleged negligence in unprepared-ness, the ill-will likely to be incurred from France, and the evils of compound interest as applied to the French debt. He advocated the slicing of $2,000,000,000 off the gross total French debt, $1,000,000,000 to represent the combined total of unpaid interest on the original debt and the large amount of debt for secondthe large amount of debt for secondthe large amount of debt for second-hand war material left in France after the war which he asserted was largely "junk" and the other $1,000,-000,000 to represent "compensation," which he felt was due France for its sacrifices in devastation and men.

wiped out," he concluded, "so I fix

American Benefits Seen Mr. Knox took up the argument to insist that America was more bene-fited by making the loans than were the Allies in receiving them. America entered the war for self-defense, he said, and America's chief contribution to the war was financial.

"Of all the billions we raised and spent for our own army, only a small percentage produced guns and ammunition available to our troops at the front before the armistice motors did not get one of them ove the enemies lines until a few days

NATION'S MONEY WELL MANAGED. SAYS MR. MILLS

General Lord Also Tells of Federal Budget's Savings at Virginia Forum

By a Staff Correspondent

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Aug. 9-A striking picture of the fiscal policy and of the administration and management of the finances of the Federal Government was presented at the Institute of Public Affairs here, by two of the Nation's financial managers, Ogden L. Mills, Undersecretary of the Treasury and Gen. Herbert M. Lord, Director of the

The speakers portrayed the Governmental fiscal machinery as manned by men and women of high purpose and integrity, devoting skill purpose and integrity, devoting skill and earnest endeavor to an ever-increasing efficiency, economy and service. These facts, according to two officials, are all the more significant because of their comparatively recent development.

The Federal Government of today as a whole is committed loyally and willingly to the policy of justified constructive economy."

Business Organizations Mr. Mills, who in addition to his high official duties is privately interested in large business enterprises, summarized his comprehensive discourse on "Treasury Financing," with the declaration: "I can say that I have never seen two more compe-tent business organizations than those of the federal reserve banks and the United States Treasury Department.

These discussions of the Federal Government's management of its finances were flanked by a group of roundtable deliberations on a num-ber of major national economic and political issues; taxation, tariff, farm relief, state and local government, press relations. The debates at the ring; but it was a subject of general comment among those attending the institute that these arguments and controversies only set off the more sharply the work that the great business agencies of the Government are quietly doing in managing the fiscal affairs of the Nation.

Mr. Mills discussed in detail the operations of the Treasury. The roblem of current financing he declared, was, in general terms, one of synchronizing peak tax payments with the maturing of heavy obliga-tions, and in the intervals to have in the bank no more funds than are seeded to meet current expenditures Mills declared, was so well devised and adjusted that it functions with such smoothness as to be almost im-perceptible in its influence on the normal financial conditions of the country. $2,000,000,000 in One Day This, he said, was all the more remarkable when the magnitude of (Continued on Page 4, Column 1) tion was found to be a success.

Part of this burden is carried by the oil industry which collects the tax. However, so far as possible all gasoline taxes are added to the consumers' price, so that it is the owner of the automobile, truck, bus, motorcycle and other motor vehicle on whom the burden of the tax finally rests. It is estimated by the Journal that this tax will average $928,461 daily during the month of August. Increase in gasoline taxes which recently have become effective in several states, together with new taxes in Illinois and New Jersey, have added greatly to the total gasoline tax. The present large tax also is partially due to the fact that the country is now in the midst of the greatest gasoline-consuming season

Some Exempt Tractors Forty-six states now have a tax of from 2 to 5 cents a gallon on gasoline sold within the state boundaries. Some states exempt gasoline used by tractors in farming but these exemptions are of no significance when compared to total of tax col-

The latest State in which a gas-oline tax became effective was Illinois. They started to collect a 2-cent tax in that State on Aug. 1. The new tax of 2 cents in New Jersey became effective July 1. Both of these States are large consumers of gasoline. As shown in the accompanying table the tax during August will cost the owners of motor vehicles $40,488 daily in Illinois, and in New Lewest $28,555 daily.

In addition to these new taxes, increases in the tax rate have become effective in several states during the past few weeks. Included in these in-creases are Florida from four to five cents; South Dakota, three to four cents; West Virginia, 3½ to four cents; Iowa, two to three cents; California, two to three cents, and Pennsylvania, two to three cents. Due to the increase in tax, California now pays more tax than any other state. Its tax during August will average in excess of $90,000 daily. Ohio-which also increased its tax from two to three cents on May 25—is the second largest gasoline tax payer with a total of $77,335 daily, and Pennsylvania third with a daily tax of $69,878.

must be complete, the man on the street must be there, the crowds assembled cannot be neglected, and each detail must appear as it did when the event took place. The flashback, he said, is an effective method of telling the story in an interesting manner, as when Benjamin Franklin refers to Thomas Paine's "Common Sense," and the motion picture returns to the time of motion picture returns to the time of motion picture returns to the time of Paine's great book and the reaction of the public toward it.

Speaking of the element of environment in history, Professor Knowl-ton defined it as the stage on which the actors move. Whereas a text-book on history is limited to describ-ing the setting of the Declaration of Independence as Continental Hall of Philadelphia, the motion picture shows the entire building reproduced with a view of a Philadelphia street as it appeared in 1776. In producing the picture, it was found that the actual Continental Hall, which still stands in Philadelphia, had been changed in many details and would therefore be unsuitable for photo-graphing the Continental Hall of 1776. This necessitated the reconstruction of a hall to resemble the old building in every detail. Con-tinental Hall has since been changed to answer the original description as discovered by the Yale committee.

cannot be adequately portraved. Mr. Knowlton said, except through a photoplay, and even in a photoplay it is difficult and elusive to deal with. A textbook, he said, is satisfied with giving a mere date, but a motion picture must reflect the tone of society at that particular time, showing the social functions of the people with all the great men resent with the masses.

—The 51,056 motion picture theaters in the world today are serving as school rooms in which the children of all nations are being taught tolerance of all nations, Carl E. Milliken, secretary of the Motion picture Producers and distributors of America, Inc., said yesterday at the meeting of the World Federation of Education Associations in Toronto. Countless millions of persons of all races are being acquainted with the ideals of other races through the motion pictures, Mr. Milliken declared, and in this fact, he said, lies a great hope for the eventual outlawing of

"The acquisition of this knowledge

"The acquisition of this knowledge of world affairs is salutary in bringing to the people increased understanding of and friendship for all other nations. No longer is it true that half of the world ignores what the other half is doing."

Mr. Milliken voiced the hope that the World Federation of Education Associations would themselves some day sponser the production of a series of pictures revealing the significant chacarteristics of all nations. "With such pictures telling the history, revealing the backgrounds, tory, revealing the backgrounds, ideals, customs, and hopes of a race of people, exhibited in times of strained relations, might be the cause of averting an internation

Recognition of the motion picture Recognition of the motion picture as the common means of communication between nations is becoming more evident each day, said Mr. Milliken. He declared that there are now 51,056 motion picture theaters listed in the world, said they were divided as follows: 20,500 in the United States; 19,773 in Europe; 2000 in Canada; 3592 in the Far East: 1932 in Latin America: 490 in East: 1932 in Latin America: 490 in Africa; and 69 in the Near East.

GERMANS FLY REPUBLIC FLAG ON ANNIVERSARY

Army, Navy, Police, State Officials, and Schools Hold "Constitution Day"

By Wireless

BERLIN, Aug. 10-Throughout Germany preparations are being made to celebrate the eighth anniversary of the Republican constitution tomorrow. In view of the fact that the young German Republic has no national holiday of its own, the Government is trying to elevate Aug. 11 into this rank against the opposition of the Nationalists. The Repub licans would like to make this day a German "Fourth of July," or a German bank holiday, but for this purpose they must first succeed in arousing the enthusiasm of the populace, which is still lacking.

At present only the army, navy, police force, government ministries and schools celebrate this holiday. All public buildings are compelled to fly the Republican flag, and school children must attend a short celebration at which they are told the importance of the constitution. In factories, stores, banks and all other offices, however, the work continues as on any other day, and as long as this is the case the population itself will pay little attention to "Con-stitution Day."

What the Constitution Did

What the Constitution Did

The population, moreover, does not know, or has long forgotten, what it owes to the Weimar Constitution. Even the organizers of the celebrations to be held tomorrow fail to point out this to them. They merely stress the fact that the Constitution saved Germany from anarchy, after the nation's defeat in the

The Constitution enables the peo-ple to decide whether they want war or peace. It gave Germany religious freedom, and liberated woman in this country by giving her equal rights of franchise and enabling her to be elected into Parliament. There are at present 33 women deputies in the German Reichstag. In other words the Weimar Constitution elevated the German people from a nation not permitted to take part in the govern-ment of its own affairs to one which is solely responsible for its country's conduct. Nationalists Reconciled to It

The fact that the German people lacking the necessary experience, stood this test at a time when chaos threatened and the Nation was still surrounded by hostile neighbors suf-fering under its defeat, is proof of the fine qualities inherent in Ger-mans, to the liberation of which the Weimar Constitution may contribute much.

The Nationalists, who at first refused to have anything to do with the Republic, now realize that it is better that they reconcile themselves to the new régime and shape it according to their liking as long as this is possible. as this is possible.

Envoy to Be "at Home"

The German Ambassador to the United States, Dr. O. C. Kiep, who is spending the summer at Manchester-by-the-Sea on the North Shore, will celebrate Constitution Day very quietly tomorrow. He plans simply to put up the flags and to be "at home" to people who care to call. The Boston German consulate is to be closed tomorrow.

Dr. Kiep expects that in New York and other places the German nationals will assemble and listen to speeches in observance of the day, but he feels that the diplomatic corps

The Locarno method, which means that the big four, direct Europe, ignores the needs of the little powers, at the head of which France should put itself.

M. Briand, in receiving the newspaper men, expressed real regret at M. de Jouvenel's resignation. It astonished him, because M. de Jouvenal had not previously protested against the course followed. LINDBERGH HONORED IN INDIANAPOLIS

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 10 (P)—Riding through 13 miles of streets banked on either side with cheering persons, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh yesterday received an acclaim from pine quill work. An Indian cradle was the gift to Mrs. Baldwin, this having come from Obijuan, Que., 260 miles west of Montreal. Mrs. Baldwin also received a beaded moose-bag and Indian dress slippers, moc-casins and gloves of caribou skin Indianapolis; 250,000 persons, it was estimated, added their voices to the praise of the youthful filer after he arrived from Louisville.

In his speech Colonel Lindbergh emphasized that he had left behind his transatlantic exploit and is now engaged in the task of introducing the cause of practical, everyday avi-

Reception at Brandon

BRANDON, Man., Aug. 10 (AP)-Thousands of people gave enthusiastic greeting to the Prince of Wales. Prince George and Mr. Baldwin of Great Britain upon their arrival in Brandon yesterday afternoon. In the party were Mrs. Baldwin and Robert Forke, Minister of Immigration. The reyal visitors were welcomed by Brigadier-General Kirkcaldy.

On the platform were 250 Canadian ex-service men. The Prince and Mr. Baldwin inspected them, as well as a group of Boy Scouts.

After a brief stopover, the party continued on its way westward.

"The public debt," Mr. Mills explained, "is the governing factor in treasury financing. It is the policy of the Treasury to reduce our war fiebt at a reasonably rapid rate, and so the Treasury to reduce our war febt at a reasonably rapid rate, and further to relieve the burden by replacing high interest-bearing securities with others carrying a lower rate whenever opportunity offers.

"This twofold process of exchange and retirement is effected in the main by calling outstanding issues at convenient dates. The funds needed to meet obligations actually presented for payment are obtained through the sale of short-term paper, maturing on tax-payment dates, thus enabling the Treasury further to ease any possible strain resulting from a heavy maturity.

"This process keeps in existence a short-term debt, which is of great value in facilitating current-financing and in avoiding the disturbance that might result from heavy tax payment on quarter-tax payment days. It is not a complicated process but it is by no means an automatic one. It implies a definite policy, sound judgment in carrying it out, and a highly competent organization of what it means. And we should not let ourselves be misled into believing that the methods we use to foster and promote our urban industries are likewise promoting the welfare of the farmers."

General Lord declared that the establishment of the budget bureau and the general accounting office in 1921, was the outcome of a Nation-wide demand to demobilize the federal service, to reduce staggering expenditures and check the rising national debt. Until these bureaus were put into operation, all efforts to effect these economies had been truitless, the speaker observed.

The first great effort of the retrenchment campaign under the budget bureau was the development of team-work, the creation of a community of interest: in the governmental service, It was first necessary, General Lord explained, to revolutionize the mential attitude of the people in the federal service, to make them "think in terms of the United States rather than in terms of departments and bureaus."

Dr. Gus W. Dyer, professor of eco nomics and sociology at Vanderbil University and the leader of the round table on "The Economic Development and Industrialization of the South," in opening his conference the South, in opening his conference viewed the unprecedented industrial unfoldment of the South as presag-ing its early leadership in American industry. The South, he held, pos-sessed every resource and facility for such supremacy. Its problem, ac cording to Dr. Dyer, was not pri marily one of developing economi cally, but of meeting the multitude of factors growing out of such an industrialization.
"Southern industrial leaders to a large extent have so far shown a keen appreciation of these problems of industry," Dr. Dyer said. "They at present indicate that they are aware of the important fact that industrialization is not only a prob lem of business, finance, and n They are giving attention the spiritual, moral, educational, and recreational interests of their em-ployees and the communities in which they are situated.

"There are great textile mills in North Carolina, developed only in the last few years, which look like summer estates. The employees are cared for. Labor in the South is distinctive, not because, as it is popularly held, it is a cheap labor, but because it is good labor."

DEBT TANGLE OF AUSTRALIA 'CLEARED UP

Federal Control of Credits and Debts of All Australian States Agreed To Government has been settled in a three days' conference here between the Prime Minister of the Commonwealth, S. M. Bruce, and all the premiers and treasurers of the states.

The agreement was reached with an entire absence of political party considerations. All the premiers, except Mr. Butler of South Australia, represented labor governments, and the proposal which they had under consideration was put forward by the Nationalist-controlled Federal Governments in complete the Labor Party. ernment, in which the Labor Party forms the Opposition.

The new arrangement, which was the proposal of Mr. Bruce, provides:

1. The Commonwealth to take over all the state public debts.

2. The Commonwealth to apply £7,584,912 annually from its revenues toward payments of the in-terest charges; the states to contribute the remainder.

3. Properly safeguarded sinking funds to be established in respect to existing state debts and new borrowings; the Commonwealth to make substantial contributions to those sinking funds.

4. The management of debt and future borrowings on behalf of the Commonwealth and the states to be bested in an Australian Loan Council consisting of a representative of each state and a representative of Commonwealth.

A final settlement in respect to transferred properties, based on the Commonwealth's assuming the li-abilities for the interest and principal of an equivalent amount of state debts.

Arrangement at Federation

Before the federation of the states took place in 1901, each state was a self-governed unit with its own customs, tariffs, postal and other services, and with nothing in common in respect to management. When the Federal or Commonwealth Government was formed, however, the federal authorities took over from the eral authorities took over from the states the administration of the customs, postal and other services pay into the sinking fund, for a pewhich it was considered affected the Commonwealth as a whole, and to the raising of the loan a sum equal compensate the state governments to 5s. per cent of the amount of the for the loss of the revenue from such loan.

Commonwealth Takes Action

The importance of reaching some ar-rangement is indicated by the fact that the state debts total £640,000,000.

Commonwealth Takes Action The system, however, remained in operation, as no other basis for state and federal relationship had been arand federal relationship had been arrived at. Last year the Federal Govanne accomplishment of great imporernment brought the matter to a head by announcement that it proposed to discontinue the per capita payments and at the same time with-draw from the field of land and income taxation, thus giving the states

Over there, at Adelaide House, they pump the water up to the tank on the roof from an artesian well below the level of the Thames." Adelaide House, the block of offices on London Bridge, has a roof garden "de luxe." Two gardeners are employed to look after it, for on the north and west sides a model putting-course has been laid out with Cumberland turf. It has nine inches of soil, over clinkers, and the course is reckoned as good to play on as the lawn of a golf club. The last job of the crane used in the building was to bring up the gardenroller—the first garden-roller to be used on a roof in London. The roof-

AMERICAN-ENGLISH BUNGALOW TO FORE IN REALTY DEVELOPMENT

Quaint Architecture Combining Utility and Comfort Includes Rambling Roofs, Dormer Windows and Attractive Chimneys

How a development of modern type bungalow can be relieved of a nous similarity by being interspersed with houses of the English cottage architecture, where rambling roofs, dormers, oddly designed chimneys and doorways predominate, is seen in a development in Fenno Street, Wollaston, where George E. Tuscan, local realtor, is erecting two houses of strictly English architec-

Of the two houses, which are practically completed except for the landscaping, the design is probably more typically English. The long slope of its roofs brings the eaves down to about eight or nine feet from the ground, tending to enhance the cozy aspect of the exterior. The main body of the house is on the right of a wide chimney and entrance, the roof, on the right hand side sloping away in an unbroken trance, the roof, on the right hand side sloping away in an unbroken line from the ridgepole to form a covering for a built-in portico.

Extending out from the roof of the main portion of the house at the left is a roof which runs at right angles, being part of the house which forms an ell. The ell roof extends down on the front side in an unbroken line from the ridgepole to broken line from the ridgepole to form a covering for the vestibule at form a covering for the vestibule at the front entrance.

Aside from the English architecture in the relation of the main house and ell and their long pitched roofs, other characteristics, peculiar to this type of architecture are embodied in the design. The small paned and extensive window area where the windows bear no conformity in size to the others, but rather seem to be more sensibly adapted to the practical needs of the occupants, is a notable feature.

Built out from the front door is a brick wall about two feet high, which

At the right of the vestibule is a chimthe right of the vestibule is a chim-ney fully as wide as the entrance, which is divided into a pair of chim-neys at a point two-thirds up. Mr. Tuscan explains that the unusually large chimney and the branching up of the two as well as the "swell" up of the two as well as the "swell" in the roof above the front entrance are merely for decorative purposes. Entering from one vestibule is a large living room at the right of which are the stairs leading to the second floor. The living room ex-tends across the entire front of the house. There is an unusually large house. There is an unusually large fireplace in this room. Next to the living room on the same end which faces the portico is the dining room while to the left of it is the kitchen.

Three large chambers and a tile bath are provided in the second floor layout. For all the pitched roof effect given from the outside the interior of the rooms are not cut into to any noticeable extent except the bath which is directly above the front entrance. Here, however, the dormer window eliminates much of this loss of head room.

The house contains all of the modern facilities and is heated by hot water. The interior walls are papered and the woodwork is in duco finish. The roof is covered with shingles of varied colors. In addition to the usual landscaping with lawns and shrubbery, Mr. Tuscan will erect window plant boxes on the entire

SEATTLE, Wash., Aug. 10 (Special)-Paternalistic government and mounting taxation were deprecated by Merle Thorpe, editor of Nation's Business before the general sessions of the twentieth annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards which opened here today following a preliminary two-day session of the Pacific Northwest "Peaceful revolution is going on "Peaceful revolution is going on Mr. "Peaceful revolution is going on before our eyes in America," Mr. Thorpe pointed out, "Elighteen governors of American states at Macinac Island last month launched a radical program of paternalistic projects. Columbia, and Idaho, Montana, Ore-Columbia, and Idaho, Montana, Oregon and Washington attended the preliminary convention, the delegates being welcomed by E. C. Baird, president of the Seattle Real Estate Board. J. W. Wheeler of Seattle, president of the association, responded. C. C. Hieatt of Louisville, president of the national association gave an address on the "importance of organization in on the "importance of organization in present day business," in which he told his listeners that statistics of the Department of Labor showed that a large proportion of the people of this country were not properly supplied with homes.

Advocates Aggressive Policy

Mrs. W. H. Wright of Chicago, chairman of the advertising commit-tee of the National Association said that every real estate board should have an active and aggressive pub-licity and advertising committee to keep the public informed. Two many realtors were sleeping peacefully while many people were invest-ing their savings in ill-advised peculations.

J. E. Woods, of Winnipeg, Canada. before the property management division of the national association said that the old-fashioned landlord who looked after his tenant's needs in person if at all is giving way to the modern professional property manager, who "besides keeping the tenant's quarters smartly up-to-date and in the best condition, the prop-erty manager must give his client, the property owner, the ultimate in service."

Harold M. Bixby, president of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, in a paper read before the national association, told how St. Louis is estate I am sure that the public is the gainer from their presence and will receive from them the utmos of service in courtesy, understanding, sympathy, and good judgment.

"The important thing," he said, "is to find out what resources you have and then plan intelligently for the future on definite knowledge rather than on mere aspiration or hopes. Take inventory to learn your advantages and disadvantages. Then determine on a logical plan of development, get the co-operation of the leaders in your community—and go ahead."

Women's Place in Real Estate Woman's place is not in the home when she wishes to embrace real estate as a career, nor even in the home-selling business, solely, Grace Perego, an apartment builder and general broker of San Francisco, told women realtors.

"It would be as difficult to say in which particular line success would be assured to women as it would be to say in which particular line men would best succeed," she said. "It is true that many women make their start in the real estate business sell-ing homes because they seem natur-ally adapted to this line on account of their familiarity with home re-quirements, but they only continue in this field until they find' themselves and develop a broader knowledge of real estate, then they invade any branch they choose. Women in the real estate business are here to stay and they are a credit to and the pride of the local real estate boards who are for-tunate enough to embrace them in their membership, according to set on foot toward the end of the

THERE are many who want to books and know that they want them, but there are also many who have for so long been deprived of literature that they are unaware of its value. The county library supplies books to those who want them and also tries to teach the others how to use them.

In 1915 when Professor Adams prepared his "Report on Library Provision and Policy" for the Carnegie United kingdom Trustees, he estimated that while 79 per cent of the urban population lived in library areas, only 2½ per cent of the rural population had any library provision made for them. Now thanks to the generosity and wise policy of the Carnegie Trustees only 3.7 per cent of the total population are without Carnegie Trustees only 3.7 per cent of the total population are without the chance of obtaining books through the Public Library Service. The county library movement in Kent, England, started in a small, almost insignificant way, but the change of outlook that has taken place in 10 years is striking. In the early years it was thought sufficient to send a box of 50 books to the village school and to change these books periodically. But once people's appetities were whetted it became evident that a more extensive service was Neither Mr. Scroggins nor Fib gave a satisfactory answer.

"And besides," said Florrie, pointing to the oblong object as it hung there, "no watermelon could float in the air, and no watermelon ever had a rope tied to it, hanging down while the watermelon floated."

That gave Mr. Scroggins another chance to defend himself. "Perhaps the water in the watermelon turned to steam," he observed gravely.

Florrie scoffed loudly. "What's the use of this talk?" she said. "That's a balloon, and let's have no more silliness."

Mr. Scroggins said nothing. He walked over and took hold of the rope, or cord, and pulled the oblong object down nearer to him. As he pulled on the rope, the object tugged upward. And suddenly the old squirrel had one of his great ideas.

"Watch!" he said to Florrie and Fib. "And you'd better follow me on those wings of yours, for I'm going to take a trip through the air." So saying, he fastened the rope under his arms and around his waist. The tug of the big balloon, for that really was what it was, was so great that he bobbed up and down as he said it, just as though someone were pulling him from above.

He finally made the rope secure around himself. Then he grasped it firmly with both paws, having first put the cane between his legs, gave himself a push with his feet and up he soared off the ground and sailed right over the top of Ulmus Americana, greatly to the surprise of Mrs. Scroggins, who saw the balloon and wondered what it was, but fortuately did not see her husband.

THE lingering day is gone. Softly in "perfect French," having learned the language since the last time that his friends saw him.

The idea is not new, for Holmes presented it, though not so seriously love. As the day and night mingle and the stars begin to peep, and the dusk-the silent messenger of restcomes like a strange blue mist and merges into the perfumed darkness, there comes with it a wordless wonder as the beautiful moon flowers slowly open within the silent gray green frame.

It seems that I am not alone; no face is visible, no voice is audible, and yet there is a sweetness as of someone's presence on this vinecovered porch: a feeling of intimacy with harmony. O the faint, sweet Major Andre. . . . There was something so odd about the extent and limitations of his knowledge, that I bringing with it a realization of suspected all at once what might be things known before in dreams, and the meaning of it, and waited till I a larger sense of living. Come board my speeding charlot that bears you for a crown or two From shire to shire, by bridge and spire, from Lee to Muswell Hill; pass by ancient palaces, I sweep across a Down or two, You'll swear it's worth a crown or two

From dawn to dark by city streets, with scarlet sides I hurry down; Quit sordid care, climb up my stair, and glide with me along, And you may dream in Warren Wood or ponder on a Surrey Down; My wheels shall beat your worry down And fill your soul with song.

Choose well your day, and if in doubt just ask some wise old weather-head; Take bread and cheese, and if you please, an apple and a bun; And you may revel half a day at Epping or at Leatherhead, As blithe as any feather-head

There's pageant on the sky for you. The stately clouds go speeding on, A fleet of sail that braves the gale across the windy vast;

Anon they seem a host of horse in sudden dust stampeding on To find fresh fields for feeding on,

So board my speeding chariot and leave your native soil behind; I fly like fire from shire to shire, from Sheen to Seven Kings; I've got a Spartan at the wheel, another drum of oil behind; Though slower wheels may toil behind, It's you that shall have wings.

It can hardly be said, however, that either the Braves or the Phillies lack strength at bat or in the field. What they seem to lack is organized effort to regarized effort is the most urgent need of a club that has been down around the bottom for a long time, as it inspires confidence. The Braves show flashes of greatness which cause local fans of that city to wonder just what the difficulty is that keeps them constantly near the foot of the standing. THURSTON PITCHES AND HITS
WASHINGTON, Aug. 10—The hitting and pitching of Thurston enabled Washington to defeat Cleveland here yesterday, 4 to 2, thereby dividing the four games of the series with the Indians.
Thurston allowed nine hits but kept them quite well scattered and at bat he contributed a double and two singles. The victory was Thurston's thirteenth of the season in 21 starts, while the record of Buckeye was exactly reversed by the defeat, giving him 13 defeats in 21 starts.
Rice, in right field for the winners, made six putouts. The score:

GERWAN BICYCLE WINNERS

NEW YORK, Aug. 10—George Dempsey, one of Australia's speedlest cyclists, defeated William Spencer, the present champion of the United States, the half-mile national championon the second-place Pittsburgh club in the race for league leadership as Pittsburgh defeated New York once. The victory of the Cubs in the first game, 2 to 0, was their ninth straight but their consecutive run was broken in the final contest, 5 to 4. Carlson pitched the opener against Petty and a pitchers' duel ensued with each club being held to six hits. Carlson won his thirteenth game while Petty lost his tenth in 22 starts. As usual the Brooklyn star hurled a brilliant brand of ball but his teammates failed to hit for him. Guy Bush started for the Cubs in the final and was taken out in the fifth inning. From then on the winners were held scoreless but they had already acquired enough runs to win. Bush was credited with his fifth defeat in 13 starts. The scores:

that many of the now common house plants came originaly from that re-gion. Among these plants are the Geranium and the Pelargonium, the wild parents of which were among the earliest introductions from the corners of the earth, seeking new more than 100 species, besides which he saw millions of plants laden with flower. From the beauty of the Heaths he turns to some of nature's freaks and fancies, among them the Euphorbias many of which are armed with fero clous spikes and are planted by th natives as hedges to protect their kraals and villages from surprise at-tacks. Curiously enough, some of these Euphorbias were introduced into India by Arab tribes, and from thence carried to China, where they are also to be found, being used as hedges to fence in homesteads.

Among the peculiar trees of South Africa, of which Mr. Wilson speaks, is the Silver Tree, which is found in a very limited locality there, and nowhere else in the world. This tree is extraordinarily fascinating, ac-cording to the author, growing 75 feet high, with bark which is smooth and nearly white, and with fruit which looks like an egg-shaped

In Australia

It is only a short journey from Africa to Australia, where the Eucalyptus trees are dominant. It is Aus tralia which gave California and other parts of the world the red-flowered Eucalyptus ficifolia, which the author calls a jewel beyond price Curiously enough, of the 10,000 species of plants indigenous to Austra lia, four-fifths are to be found no where else. One of these curious plants is the raspberry-jam tree, the wood of which has precisely the odor of raspberry jam. This tree is really an Acacia.

One wishes that the author had written more fully about his personal experiences, many of which must have been thrilling, but his modesty is indicated by his tendency to eliminate the personal pronoun throughout the book. action there is even less than in "Mrs. Dalloway;" and in that the latest novel perhaps marks an advance. The outward subject-matter has to do with the disappointed desire of one of the children to go to the lighthouse. Ten years go by, and with them pass Mrs. Ramsay and several other characters. Then

Exquisite Imagery

As a plot, in the conventional sense, this surely approximates nihility. But that doesn't matter in the least.

For while Mrs. Ramsay sits by the window in the first part, while "Time Passes" in the second, and while the progress to the lighthouse is being made in the third, we learn more about Mr. and Mrs. Ramsay and their influence on their children and their influence on their children and their friends than we should ever learn from an exhaustive ac-count of their doings. The only ac-tool takes place in parentheses. But we are admitted into the secret thoughts of these people; we feel that we understand them.

Nevertheless, "To the Lighthouse" is perhaps a little less assuredly complete than "Mrs. Dalloway."

The first part is its lighthouse.

The first part is in itself a perfect thing. The second, recording the passage of years in the old house, is an even greater achievement, and contains, we believe, some of the most exquisite imagery in the lan-down just a little. Next time, we are confident, Mrs. Woolf will set herself an even higher key and main-

Those who nowadays openly sing the praises of dictatorships have surely found their beau-ideal in Mussolini. Even as this review is being written comes the news of a distinguished Italian liberal who has been sentenced to a fine and four years imprisonment. His offence! Nothing more than that of seeking to escape from Italy to some foreign country where freedom of opinion is still permitted. Can such a system conceivably last much longer, or has Italy definitely returned to the Dark Ages?

STOCK MARKET ADVANCE STILL IS UNCHECKED

Steels, Utilities, and Rails Participate - Timken and Du Pont Rise

NEW YORK, Aug. 10 (49)—Stock orices showed signs of further recovery as the market opened today. Opening gains of 1 to 1½ points were egistered by May Department Stores, Seneral Electric and California Packing.

Operators for the advance pushed up several industrial leaders, keeping a weather eye on the U. S. Steel unfilled orders report due this noon, and the dividend meeting of General Motors Corporation tomorrow. U. S. Steel advanced on preliminary guesses that the steel tonnage would show a material increase over the June 30 figures.

ne of the independent steels displayed simultaneous strength, notably Republic and Bethlehem, which sold up a point or so. Peoples Gas and Con-solidated Gas led the utilities, with ad-

Timken Roller Bearing improved 3½ points and du Pont and Bosch Magneto 2½ each. Among the rails, strength was displayed by Western Maryland, New York Central, Northern Pacific and Canadian Pacific.

Gains of a point or more were quickly recorded by American Linseed, Radio, Packard Motor, U. S. Cast Iron Pipe and Allied Chemical.

Foreign exchanges opened firm, demand sterling ruling slightly higher around $4.85%, and French francs unchanged below 3.92 cents.

Prospects that credit conditions would remain easy for an indefinite time caused brisk bidding for shares with a long record of dividend-payments behind them. Quite a few high priced issues were buoyant, Brooklyn Union Gas for example, rising 8% to 150, and Brooklyn Edison 5% to 182%, both new peaks.

both new peaks.

Some of the speculative issues reflected the precipitate retreat of the short interests, Baldwin reaching a new high price at 254. The renewal rate on call loans was continued at 3%

Convertible Bonds Buoyant

Convertible Bonds Buoyant
Strength of convertible bonds was the outstanding feature of today's market, while signs of returning firmness were present in the list of high grade issues which have been sagging since the first of the week.

Brooklyn Union Gas 5½s followed the shares in a sweep upward, advancing 6 points to 226, while the Errord's 4 also rose sharply. White Sewing Machine 6s leaped 5 to 148, making a gain since last Saturday of more than a dozen points.

"Katy" adjustment 5s were among the leading high grade rail liens, while Hudson & Manhattan 5s, Missouri Pacific General 4s and a few others also improved fractionally.

Strength and activity of French issues stood out in the foreign group, particularly Nord Railway 6½s, which is sold up more than a point and a small fraction under their high price for the year.

BOSTON STOCKS UNITED FRUIT STOCK IS IN HIGH REGARD

Shares Reach New High-Outlook for Second-Half Earnings Is Good

United Fruit Co. shares a few days ago sold at 138% on the New York Stock Exchange. This is equivalent to 346% for the old $100 par stock before it was exchanged April, 1926, in the ratio of 2½ for one for new no-par common. The current high level is actually equivalent to 697% a share for the old stock as it stood before the 100 per cent stock dividend of January, 1921.

To illustrate the wisdom of the retention of United Fruit shares by owners it is interesting to note that the highest price for the old stock last year was $297. The highest price back in 1921 before the stock dividend was $207 a share. The market history of United Fruit is akin to that of the highest-grade insurance and bank stocks, which have also always been noteworthy for low income yield.

The latest advance in United Fruit shares appears distinctly to be due to heavy investment buying coming into a market devoid of large offerings. Investment trusts and trustees continue to favor the stock, despite its low yield on the $4 regular dividend basis, on the basis of stability, of earning power, and possibilities for expansion.

GREATNORTHERN ROAD LOOKS FOR EXCELLENT YEAR

Possibility of Dividend Increase-Earnings Continue to Gain

Great Northern is the only large system in the Northwest that showed an increase in gross and net for the first half over the corresponding period of 1926. Increased gross was largely due to a gain in ore and miscellaneous traffic.

Await Merger Decision

ood shares common stock (no par value).

Net earnings of the merged companies for the year ended Dec. 31, 1926, were $3,472.184, equal to 4.45 times annual interest requirements on the $12.000,000 debentures. Earnings available for interest in the four years ended Dec. 31, 1926, averaged $3,205,751 annually, equivalent to 4.11 times such requirements.

The operating management will continue in the hands of former executives of the predecessor companies.

COTTON ADVANCE FELT IN ENGLAND

MANCHESTER, Eng.. Aug. 10—The sudden rise of a penny and three farthings in the price of cotton following the American bureau's croppeport, brought business on the Royal Exchange practically to a standstill today and caused apparent anxiety in some mill towns. Sir Charles Macara, president for 21 years of the Federation of Master Cotton Spinners, commenting on the bureau estimate, said he did not anticipate a serious shortage and that no shortage would be felt had the International Federation of Master Cotton Spinners adopted his By Wireless via Postal Telegraph from Halifas felt had the International Federation of Master Cotton Spinners adopted his suggestion in 1907 that reserves of cotton should be established against years in which even partial crop failure might be expected.

The advanced price and the decision to recommend an extra week's stoppage of mills, in addition to the annual holiday, are also outstanding topics of interest in Manchester cotton circles today.

ROSS STORES, INC., SALES Sales of Ross Stores, Inc., for July and the six months ended July 31 follow: 1927 1926

THE steamship lines carrying American tourists abroad have been compared with the New York subways by L. B. Sanderson Jr., secretary and member of the Jr., secretary and member of the committee of directors, recently installed in control of Sanderson & Sons, shipping agents for the Royal Mail and subsidiary lines. One of the big problems of the shipping agencies, he observed, is to eliminate the vacation rush, and, if traffic can be staggered over the year, he indicated his belief that rates might be substanially reduced.

staggered over the year, he indicated his belief that rates might be substantially reduced.

Judging from an estimate of gross this year by President Ralph Budd, and optimistic crop reports for that section, it seems likely that share section, it seems likely that share on $248,916,550 preferred for 1927. In some well-informed quarters it is expected as much as $13 a share will be shown if crop prospects materialize. If $11.50 a share is reached, it will reflect the best earning power since 1913, when $11.70 was earned. Last year arnings were $10.39, in 1921 $11.41 and for the year ending June 30, 1916, they were $11.06.

If the present earning rate should continue, stockholders expect an increase in dividend from a $5 rate to $6. It may come in a $6 rate to the stock of Great Northern Pacific Railway, the new company under which Northern. Pacific and Great Northern as to be merged as proposed in the application before the Commerce Commission, or, if the merger is denied, Great Northern as an independent company probably would be in position by that time to raise its dividend.

The warming was a street of gross this belief that rates might be substantially reduced.

"The thousands who now all try to rush in and out of America's front door at the same time must necessarily help to pay for the many voyages when a ship travels with cabins almost empty," Mr. Sanderson said. If the traffic were spread out over a longer period of time the congestion would not be noticeable, it is spointed out, in which respect the situation resembles that of the New York subways, which must handle a peak load at certain times of the day. Statistics quoted by Mr. Sanderson show that of the ships carrying first-class passengers a annual average of only 120 passengers a voyage was reported. Ships carrying cabin passengers averaged 75 to the voyage.

Northern as an independent company probably would be in position by that time to raise its dividend.

Await Merger Decision

The merger application was presented in the forepart of July. A decision, judging from the action in Nickel Plate and Southwest merger cases, can be expected before the middle of 1928. Moreover, by that time the commission will probably have passed on the application for increased class freight rates in western trunk line territory.

President F. W. Sargent of Chicago & North Western expects a decision on the rate question before this year-end. Work on the Great Northern Cascade tunnel probably will be completed in 1928. Thus matters of policy, which have militated against any change in dividend rate, probably will be cleared up by the middle of next year.

With the possible exception of Chicago & North Western, paying 34. Great Northern appears in a better with the possible exception of Chicago & North Western, paying $4. Great Northern appears in a better position to increase its dividend than any other large railroad in the Northewest, and is likely to be the first to do so. Of course, so long as the present merger application is pending, no increase can be expected directly. If the merger is approved, well-informed quarters expect the stock of Great Northern Pacific Railway to be put on a $6 basis.

Earnings Gain Each Month

duarters expect the stock of Great Northern Pacific Railway to be put on a $5 basis.

Earnings Gain Each Month Each month in the first half of this year Great Northern showed an increase in gross and net, except January and February. Gross for the half was $47,784,229, compared with $47,198,051 last year. For the year Mr. Budd expects gross to total $120,000,000, compared with $117,383,909 in 1926. Great Northern moved 175,000,000,000, compared with $117,383,909 in 1926. Great Northern moved 175,000,000,000, compared with $117,383,909 in 1926. Great Northern moved 175,000,000 bushels of grain in 1915, and he thinks this year's movement probably will be more.

Passenger revenues as well as freight showed an increase for the first half, the former showing a slightly shid of $5056 and the latter $487,786. Maintenance ran about the same for the half year as in 1926, the increase of $247,992 on way offsetting the decrease of $233,030 on equipment. Percentage of gross consumed by maintenance was 34.0 per cent, compared with 34.4 last year.

Transportation costs were slightly ahead of the first half of 1926, percentage of gross being 35.9 compared with 76.3 last year.

Largely due to an increase in fixed charges, surplus after charges of about $3,500,000 was below the $3,753,514 for the first half of 1926.

RADIOCASTING BOWS BEFORE S O S SIGNALS

Coastal Stations Maintain Careful Watch to Aid Distressed Ships

Unexpected drama occasionally flashes into the lives of radio listeners living near both coasts of the United States when signals of dis-tress from a ship at sea cause suspension of radiocasting.

Picture a listener who has tuned his receiver to 492 meters for one of the National Broadcasting Company's weekly radio features. The program is progressing smoothly when there is a sudden interruption. A strange voice remarks, "This is station WEAF, New York. We are signing off because of an S O S." Silence fol-lows. The station is standing by to insure that rescue arrangements may house that rescue arrangements may be carried on without interruption from radiocasting.

A hurried trip down the dials probably divulges that about half of the local stations signed off at the same time or shortly after WEAF. One by the the remaining radiocasters susone the remaining radiocasters sus-pend their programs. Within four or five minutes the air is clear. Pleas-ure, in the form of radiocast entertainment, has given way before the pressure of business. Listeners can receive a good many thrills from following the course of an SO S signal, even if they are un-able to read code. It is simple to picture a disabled steamer wallowing through 40-foot waves while a heroic radio operator clings to a support in his reeling shack on deck and sends out details of the ship's condition and sition to vessels and land stations hich have replied to his signals of distress.

The 600-Meter Watch

At the station's transmitter another angle of the drama is apparent. Every radiocasting station situated on or near the coast is required by law to maintain what is known as a "600-meter watch." Perhaps the term "600-meter listen" would be more nearly descriptive, since this "watch" consists of constant listening on the regular ship communication channel

However, the watch is strictly maintained at most of the stations. In the case of WEAF, WJZ and WRC, stations managed by the National Broadcasting Company, operators who are assigned this duty are com-are received. WEAF's transmitter is at present located at 463 West Street. The station's antenna is on the roof of this building, and the 600-meter watch is maintained in the room which houses the transmitting apparatus. The watch is begun 15 minutes before the that the ether is clear at that time, in India. and it is kept until the transmitter is shut down.

When the "watchman" hears a signal of distress, he first verifies it by communicating by telephone with the District Communication Superintendent of the Navy Department, lo-cated in the Whitehall Building. This office is in turn in constant touch with the Navy Yard in Brooklyn, where the Navy Department radio station for the district, NAH, is

Furthermore, he realized that purchasing one of these machines would entail some increases in his costs of operation, which he was anxious to keep below $1000 a year, as was indicated last week.

So Mr. Flyington turned from the cabin airplanes as one turns from a high-class limousine at the automo-bile show when one is intent upon purchasing one's first car. Of course seaplanes had their attraction for him, although he found the choice somewhat limited in comparison. But Mr. Flyington had definitely decided upon owning an airplane rather than a seaplane, so that he wasted no time

Finally Mr. Flyington made his choice, after almost being persuaded

PLANNING BOARDS TO MEET OCT. 4-5

Greenfield Chamber to Send Out Program of Events

GREENFIELD, Mass., Aug. 10— The Greenfield Chamber of Com-merce this week will send out announcements of the fourteenth an-nual conference of the Massachu-setts Federation of Planning Boards to be held here Oct. 4 and 5.

has a resilience which is not possessed by a steel framework which is very essential in the wing structure of an airplane.

Eight Cylinder Motor Used

The engine, which is mounted upon vibration absorbing mountings, has eight cylinders arranged in two banks in Vee formation and is a normal water-cooled gasoline engine very similar to that of an automobile and equally easy to maintain in working condition. Of course, the time is ters in court decisions relative to town planning ordinances

A supper will be served at the Weldon hotel at 6:30 o'clock. Gordon J. Culham will address the meeting on the subject, "Land Divisions, a New Technique."

Stratford Beacon-Herald: The newspapers are criticized more than they are commended. They are criticized because they printed this or failed to print that; because they gave too much space to one story and too little to another. But the papers continue on their way, knowing that they are filling an increasingly important part in the affairs of the community. They realize that, being human, they commit mistakes, erring in judgment and in fact. They realize, too, that these mistakes, while always regrettable and frequently the result of insufficient time for consideration and verification, are infrequent, compared with the vast amount of matverification, are infrequent, com-pared with the /ast amount of mat-

The show is to be given on each of The show is to be given on each of the 30 playgrounds. Honors will be distributed for many kinds of dolls, largest, smallest, best dressed and most beautiful. . . Certainly those who made the program very well might have omitted any contest for beauty. That particular quality is of no importance in the big world where the rag doll reigns. All such dolls are wonderful creations to the little girl owners just as all dogs smell sweet to the happy little boy owners.

EDITORIALS

A Perpetual Reminder of Peace

THERE are unplumbed depths of meaning in what the Prince of Wales said at the dedication of the great new bridge spanning the Niagara River, when he urged that it might be not merely a physical and material link between Canada and the United States but also symbolical of the maintenance of their friendly contacts by those who live on both sides of this frontier. And it is noteworthy that all of the addresses on the occasion in question emphasized the fact that, as Charles G. Dawes put it specifically, this bridge represents "a bridge of understanding, because it cements a friendship between the English-speaking peoples founded on common principles in government, of individual liberty under law, and on the instinct of self-preservation, the most deep-seated of mankind."

It is impossible to lay too much stress upon the strength of the intangible aspects of that peace which this bridge thus exemplifies. To say that the English-speaking nations are united by a bond of friendship is, indeed, no mere figure of speech, but a statement of absolute fact. And that Charles M. Schwab, chairman of the board of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, should have added his weight of authority to the peace sentiment expressed, to the effect that while he was the head of the largest ordnance works in the world he would gladly see the entire production of armaments cease and the material of war thrown into the sea, if peace could be assured, can only be seen as deeply significant.

The dedication of this bridge comes at a particularly fitting moment, because in certain quarters the effort is being made to have it appear that the inability of the various representatives assembled at Geneva to come to any definite conclusions means that the friendly relations between England and America have suffered a setback. The opening of this peace bridge refutes this propaganda. What Stanley Baldwin said, therefore, when speaking of the years of British-American peace, may be pondered to advantage in every quarter of the globe:

Problems have arisen and will arise. Opinions will vary how they shall be solved.
Only recently we have had to differ for a moment; but we know in our hearts it does not affect our friendship. Statesmen of the past, as this bridge testifies, have well and truly laid the foundations of friendship and good will in the hearts of our peoples.

Hotels Under Prohibition

NE of the favorite lines of argument of the anti-prohibitionists is the depiction of most reprehensible conditions in the hotels in the United States. We are told that never before was there so much drinking in the private rooms; that every bellboy, and many of the clerks, are agents for bootleggers; that the furniture is destroyed in the effort to open stoppered bottles: that the unfortunate hotel keeper would be doomed to financial disaster if he had not heavily increased the cost of his rooms, to the prejudice of the traveling public, and so on throughout a long category of unhappy conditions which are supposed to have proceeded from the endeavor to break the public of the liquor habit.

We have noticed with some interest that in the official congresses of hotel proprietors this feeling of antagonism to prohibition is seldom voiced, and these unfortunate results of the Eighteenth Amendment are not cited. There came to us the other day a letter, written by one of the foremost hotel keepers of the South, a man widely known to others pursuing the same calling throughout the country. In this letter he says in part:

Our experience, as you know, began after prohibition had gone into effect and we did not suffer the shock of botels over the country that were once famous for their bars, and I find that they are now famous for the cuisine and service. I have in mind particularly the Hollenden in Cleveland, which was noted the world over for its attractive and well-patronized bar, and under the management of Theodore DeWitt it is the livest spot in Cleveland, although it is not a new hotel. He has utilized every inch of space for revenue-producing purposes, and I think this has been the experience of most successful hotels It might be of interest to you to know that in my brief experience in the hotel business the amount of private drinking in rooms has decreased to a marked degree This is my experience not only here but in other cities where I attend conventions for the purpose of interesting them in this city. In fact, there are but very few conven tions now that are influenced by the question of the availability of the liquor supply, and in my discussions with convention gatherings this question has never seriously been raised.

Testimony of this sort from a practical hotel keeper, doing business in a large city, and entertaining not merely the general public but delegates to conventions, which are sometimes considered riotous occasions, will go far to controvert arguments of the anti-prohibitionists.

Military Loans to Latin America

A^{MONG} the various interesting discussions now taking place at the Institute of Politics at Williamstown, Mass., the address of Prof. G. Butler Sherwell of Georgetown University cannot fail to arrest attention beyond the immediate audience that heard this well-known economist deal with loans to Latin America.

It is worthy of notice in that connection that since 1920 the loans of the United States to Latin America amount to the huge sum of $1,527,500,900, nearly as much as the total loaned the same countries by Great Britain in 107 years. And as a considerable amount of this money has gone into the purchase of military equipment and for war purposes, Professor Sherwell properly enough contends that a closer supervision of such loans is requisite. Stricter federal and private control might prove a useful procedure under the existing conditions, he

Speaking along similar lines, Prof. William R. Shepherd of Columbia University asked that a curb be put on South American loans where such were made knowingly with the view of using the money for armament purchases. In fact, a nation and a people lavishly lending might themselves need more powerful armaments than ever unless a stop was put to such lending or

It is a big and far-reaching question that here asks an answer. The mere fact that the subject has been brought into the open at the Williamstown conference is of value in that the general public is made acquainted with something that concerns the United States more directly than any other country because of its extraordinary ability to furnish loans. At a moment in the world's history when the idea of the outlawry of war has assumed such large proportions, this matter of lending money for armament purposes is doubly significant as something to be cau-

China and the War Lords

TO PUT an end to the war-lord régime in China has been as much a part of the program of the Nationalist movement as the drive against "Imperialism." "Anti-imperialism," as a slogan, has served a more effective propaganda purpose, but the war lords have provided a more serious issue. When all of the shortcomings of western nations in China are catalogued, the sum total will not compare with the widespread evil which has been wrought among the Chinese people by the disastrous contentions of their own militarists. And one of the most serious obstacles to those international adjustments which, to the satisfaction of the Chinese Nationalists, would uproot imperialism has been furnished by the uncertain state of affairs for which the super-tuchuns were largely respon-

The extension of the authority of the Kuomintang has failed to usher in either the political or the economic millennium for which many of its supporters looked. But there were some indications that it brought a bona fide civil government to replace the war-lord régimes that had preceded it. Recent dispatches from China to The Christian Science Monitor, however, seem to indicate that that achievement has been placed in jeopardy, and that the ideals of moderate nationalism are likely again to revert to the custody of the Nation's intelligensia, with the result that China may continue, indefinitely, in that state of disunity and chaos which has prevailed since the establishment of the Republic.

The war-lord lineup now seems to be as ominous as at any time during the last decade. The immediate future involves the success or failure of two outstanding personalities: Gen. Chang Tso-lin, famous war lord of Manchuria and, at present, dictator at Peking, and Gen. Chiang Kai-shek, Nationalist commander. There are many lesser figures: Gen. Feng Yuhsien, an uncertain quantity with a well-trained army of uncertain size and allegiance; Gen. Yen Hsi-shan, governor of Shansi Province; Gen. Tan Yen-kai, commander of the military forces of the disappearing Hankow régime. The significance of these men is involved in their attitude toward Chang and Chiang:

Gen. Chiang Kai-shek has repudiated bitterly the accusation that he has turned war lord to gratify his personal ambition. Gen. Chang Tsolin, although he has given hazy indorsement of nationalist ideals and adopted strenuous measures against the "reds," makes no effort to deny either his ambition or the fact that he is a military ruler with scant patience with the less summary processes of civil government. Whatever his convictions, Chiang Kai-shek apparently has abundant precedent for subordinating civilian authority to military needs.

All of the other problems involved in the China situation must wait for their solution upon the settlement of this military question. If, by negotiation or military conquest, Chiang reaches Peking the honesty of his declarations will be put to the test. Meanwhile the advance of nationalism is likely to be stayed until the danger of a return of the war-lord régime has been removed or has run its course.

Making More and Better Gardens

HOUGH he whose hobby is collecting may shut up in glass cases his treasures of books, or coins, or clocks, or jewels, he whose hobby is gardening can never inclose his treasures by a wall so high and so thick but that something of the fragrance and delight of them will be sensed by the most casual passer-by. And then there is the gate which sometimes must swing open and through which thus will come more glimpses of the riot of color and sweetness within.

But whether his interest be given to assembling books or flowers, the true collector finds his greatest pleasure in sharing his possessions with appreciative folk, and this is what the residents of Montecito and Santa Barbara have been doing by their weekly garden tours, which any tourist is welcome to join.

Each Friday a different group of gardens is opened to the public with the only restrictions, "Do not pick flowers, follow signs along the paths and keep away from the houses." The visitors may come singly or in parties, may stroll along the paths and enjoy the blooms as they choose, but if they are gardeners themselves they are likely to join the morning and afternoon parties under the direction of a guide who is prepared to explain and to display each plot in the most thorough and effective way.

From the sale of low-price admission tags proceeds are realized for the benefit of garden owners in the vicinity. Prizes are offered for the best small gardens. A brief bibliography of books of special help in that particular climate has been printed for distribution to Californians taking the tours, and a group of horticultural experts is now assembling a list of plant material of Santa Barbara to be printed for public use. Thus it is that this group of gardeners endeavors to produce more tangible results than pleasant memory pictures and to stimulate visitors to make more and better gardens wherever their homes may be.

Americans Learning to Play

7ISITORS to the United States from foreign lands, who have returned home to record their impressions of the country of which they have seen some small part, have published numerous comments upon the amazing industrial and financial prosperity that they have found in the great cities and industrial centers. Little attention has been given by foreign journalists, economists or statesmen to the condition of agriculture, and indeed it would be wholly impossible for the casual visitor to secure anything in the nature of a true picture of farm life as a whole, or to analyze the many causes that have made farming so generally unprofitable. Whatever difference of opinion as to the reasons for American manufacturing and commercial prosperity there may be, there general agreement as to the main facts that in no other country in the world are wages so high, and profits of trade and industry so great.

If an inquiring observer had gone further than to record the relatively prosperous condition of the urban population, and had sought to give some idea of the ways in which the large incomes or the high wages were being expended, he would naturally refer to the millions of motor vehicles and radio-receiving sets as among the evidences of prosperity. Of still greater importance, however, is the abundant testimony furnished by all regions of the United States to the effect that the American people, having shown how well they have learned to work, so as to produce efficiently, are now learn-

Probably never before in the history of any country has there been such a remarkable change in the attitude of a people toward the various activities that constitute sports and recreation. From the land of hustling for the dollar the United States has become the land where dollars are lavishly spent in outdoor sports; in travel by motorcar, rail or steamship for mountain and forest camps, seashore bungalows and hotels; thousands of golf courses and tennis courts; boating and canoeing; and fishing in myriad rivers and lakes, as well as in the inexhaustible ocean. It would seem that men do not work so much to get money, as to make opportunities for full enjoyment of the beauties of the countryside, and the pleasure of some interesting sport or game. Americans have discovered that their country is a vast playground, with room for all the grownup boys and girls to share therein the endless variety of amusement afforded by mountains, lakes, seashore and rivers, and the great picturesque regions which the motorcar has made available to millions.

"Home, Sweet Home"

DERHAPS one of the most inspiring and impressive features of the Eisteddfod, held this year at Holyhead, Wales, was the singing by 10,000 voices of "Home, Sweet Home." No other song, it would be safe to say, could have united the great family of Welshmen drawn from thirteen different countries as did that of J. Howard Payne, for there is scarce another song with the simplicity, beauty and universality of appeal that approaches it. Sentimentalists have pictured the exile on the beach in far-off lands crooning it to the sound of the waves; in the depths of the forest, dwelling in imagination on the cozy hearth at home; in the Arctic wastes, cherishing memories of the warm though humble fireside. No one would deny them such flights of fancy.

In the hearts of those who have traveled afar the scene in Wales will strike a sympathetic chord. No place awakens such tender feelings as home. Enticing though the wider panorama may be, it ever carries with it the unfamiliar, if not lonely, aspect of a strange land. Goldsmith tramped through several countries in Europe, playing his flute for a living, in search of happiness. He could appreciate from his vantage point on the slopes of the Alps, the beauties and charms of Italy, of Spain, of Switzerland, of France, yet he was forced to the conclusion that there was no place like his own

"sweet Auburn! loveliest village of the plain." Economic conditions, the alluring prospects of distant lands and the exploitation of virgin regions have won from "home" many enterprising sons and daughters. Not the wish to leave home, but the desire to win their spurs abroad generally actuates the youth of older states. Yet travel as they may-be the distance ever so great-there will always remain with them thoughts of the home of their childhood and memories of people that years may dim but never extinguish. With the chorus at Holyhead. the whole world may well unite in the song:

'Mid pleasures and palaces though we may roam, Be it ever so humble, there's no place like home.

Jerusalem the Golden—Inside the Walls

BY ALBERT F. GILMORE

THE Church of the Holy Sepulchre, which is situated in the Christian quarter of the city, had its beginnings far anterior to the inception of Omar's Mosque. Many, perhaps most, Christians believe that it stands upon the holiest spot on earth, on the sites of Golgotha, the place of the Crucifixion, and of the Holy Sepulchre, where the body of Jesus was buried and resurrected.

Believers in the authenticity of this location base their conclusions on the fact that Queen Helena, mother of Constantine, came here in 325 and, as she asserted, found on this spot three crosses which she believed to have been those on which the Saviour and the two others were crucified. There is no historical mention made regarding it, and her early claim has prevailed with many chiefly because of its priority.

On the other hand the location of the second wall, which was in position at the time of the crucifixion, would settle the whole question, for the Scriptures state definitely that Golgotha was outside the wall of the city and many believe the site of the Church of the Holy Sepulchre is inside

We first entered this church on a Friday when the Franciscans were holding services at the several praying stations within its walls, a part of their regular Friday ceremonies along the Via Dolorosa. So rambling and dark is the edifice that the aid of a guide and candles are indis-pensable. It seemed strange enough to be taken to the Stone of Unction where it is held the body of Jesus was laid for anointing, to the gorgeous Chapel of the Holy Sepulchre with its white tomb, thence up a steep flight of stairs to Golgotha where our Greek guide solemnly asserted the cross was erected upon which the Saviour was crucified, and that his blood percolating through the earth at the foot of the cross reached the skull of Adam buried there, thus washing away the sins of the whole world.

Eusebius states that Constantine erected two churches here, one over the tomb of the Saviour, the other over the place of the Crucifixion. Chosroes II of Persia in 614 destroyed both, so that scarcely a stone of either remains. Again and again have structures been reared and razed on this site. The present buildings date from different periods, but probably none of them earlier than the beginning of the nineteenth century.

Later in the course of Holy Week we witnessed within this church, crowded to the doors with eager pilgrims, the sacrament of the Holy Fire, an observance designed to strengthen the faith of the followers of the Greek and Armenian churches in the presence of God. One cannot but feel, however, that the present structure and the uses to which it is put have little relation to the life and teachings of our Lord.

After a somewhat protracted ceremony consisting of the recital of a ritual by the Greek and Armenian priests, and much marching about, the patriarchs of the two orders divested of their gorgeous robes withdrew within the chapel of the Holy Sepulchre. Presently fire burst out from openings in the chapel walls and men clad in the garb of runners, lighting their own candles, eagerly ran to relight the altar fires in the church and also to light the candles of the assembled pilgrims, until the gloom of the great structure was dispelled by thousands of candles glowing like fireflies in the dark.

Other runners left the church and hastened with the sacred fire to distant towns, Bethlehem, Hebron, Jericho, even to towns in Samaria and Galilee having churches of these orders. It is a spectacular ceremony and observed from the height of the church dome takes on a sense of the weird, difficult to shake off. During the period just before the appearance of the fire, as the assembled pilgrims waited with bated breath for the appearance of what to them is a very sacred phenomenon, the situation became highly tense.

Apparently these ardent believers are convinced that their priests, like Elijah of old, are able to call down fire from heaven. And because of their belief the ceremony has for them a deep religious significance. All who par-ticipate seem spellbound by the spectacle. Yet that its regenerating effects are not far-reaching seems proved by the collision later in the day between the priests of the two participating groups, which became so violent that only police interference prevented a riot, and several priests were taken away badly beaten up.

That such a mêlée could occur on the most sacred day of Holy Week and by the chapel of the Holy Sepulchre seems to indicate a want of true Christian spirit and understanding of the Master's teachings. We looked upon the ceremony as only a strange exemplification of the observance of a religious rite in which the letter had quite outrun the spirit of Christianity.

One of the most imposing relics of the first century the Ecce Homo Arch, so called because it is claimed to be a part of the Prætorium where Pilate uttered those memorable words on that never-to-be-forgotten night. There were formerly three arches over the roadway leading into the city from St. Stephen's Gate past the house where Pilate lived. Part of two arches remain; the third has entirely disappeared.

On the north side of the street the magnificent church and convent of the Sisters of Zion occupy the site of the Prætorium. Within the walls of this building is cunningly incorporated a part of the middle arch, the largest of the three, which extends over the street and is familiar because of having been much photographed.

In the basement of the church one is shown a well-laid pavement several feet below the present level of the street, which is with reason, it seems, believed to be the courtyard of the Prætorium, the judgment hall where Jesus was brought before the procurator. In the pavement are designs for games of draughts and marbles, believed to have been made in their hours of leisure by the soldiers attendant upon the Roman official. It is a place filled with interest because of an abiding sense that here occurred important scenes in that most eventful night.

The Prætorium also marks the beginning of the Via Dolorosa as at present accepted by many, chief among them, the Franciscans, who on every Friday traverse its winding course to the Church of the Holy Sepulchre. As there seems strong evidence that the site of the crucifixion and entombment of the Saviour was at another place than that now occupied by the Church of the Holy Sepulchre, the authenticity of the present route of the Via Dolorosa also seems highly problematical.

It is a question regarding which one may find much ground for speculation. Perhaps it will never be fully settled because of the utter destruction of the city by Titus scarcely more than twoscore years after the occurrence of these events.

Of great interest to the sojourner in Jerusalem is a visit to Solomon's Quarries. For many centuries it was not known where Solomon procured the stone for building his magnificent palace and temple so minutely described in the Bible. There is no hint in the Scriptures, however, of the source of this part of the building material except "that there was neither hammer nor axe nor any tool of iron heard in the house, while it was in building." (I Kings

This would seem to indicate that the stone was not only quarried but was trimmed and fitted in some large chamber apart from the site of the buildings, and the huge cavern under the city perfectly answers this description. Great mounds of stone chips are within the chamber and the extent of the excavation is so great that engineers have, estimated that enough stone has been taken out to build the structure erected by Solomon and the whole city several times over. It seems probable that material for the walls and buildings of Jerusalem for many centuries came from this source.

The cavern reaches under the city for several hundred yards, the roof being supported by huge columns of stone left for this purpose. The almost pure white limestone is soft but hardens when exposed to the elements. The marks of the quarrymen's tools are still seen, and above the niches where rested the little lamps which furnished light, the smoke splashes are as plain as though made yesterday. Yet 3000 years or more have passed since these walls resounded to the blows of the army of workers.

The blocks of stone were cut vertically on either side and then forced off by the expansion of wooden wedges when wet with water. Where a huge keystone partially quarried is still in situ the Masonic bodies visiting the city are accustomed to hold their meetings.

So many are the places of compelling interest in Jerusalem that the lover of sacred history could stay indefinitely, searching into the distant past. The great importance, however, of the knowledge gained from this intimate acquaintance arises from its bearing upon the Bible. Personal contact with the scenes of events set forth in the sacred Scriptures brings them nearer and they assume a degree of reality which perhaps had not before been realized. Accordingly, we became convinced that in no other place on earth could we delve into the ages long past with such profit as in Jerusalem, the Golden, the Holy City of Jew, Christian and Moslem.

From the World's Great Capitals-Paris

THE melodious game of bowls on a fair English sward becomes, when translated to France, more cacophonous. The bowls are wooden, studded with nails; the game is played on a rolled gravel path. There is no bias on the bowl, which is lobbed in the air. It is fair sport, for instance, to select an opponent's bowl, which lies as if scoring a point, and throw yours neatly upon it, thus knocking it away. This is the supreme feat of the game, according to English players who watched a match of matches recently in the Tuileries garden. It was between the Senators and the Deputies of the French Parliament. They were the "boulistes," or players of bowls. Long was the measuring of distance and loud was the whacking of the bowls before the results of the afternoon showed that the Deputies had won by the small margin of 21 points to 16.

+ + + The report that France will not be represented at the Olympic Games of 1928 is probably premature and may prove to be erroneous. The Senate neglected to vote ubsidies for the sporting federations which should prepare the French champions for the contests. Thereupon the federations decided to suspend their efforts. called down upon themselves strong criticism. After all, why should they look to the state for assistance? They should be more than able to pay their way, for sport is contrary to the usual belief, very popular in France, and as many as 20,000 spectators will witness a football match. To equip and train fifty or sixty athletes to go to Amsterdam next year should not require exorbitant sums. In any case one newspaper is opening a public subscription to enable the sporting associations to organize a French team for the Olympic Games.

+ + Paris may be the turnstile for women's fashions, but it would seem a little difficult to "create" something quite new for men. The effort which has been made this summer to have men wearing brightly colored felt hats has not found many supporters. A couple of gentlemen on the Champs-Elsées, seen the other day, with multicolored hats attracted attention, certainly, but hardly praise Frenchmen are conservative fellows and probably the majority of them will still go on wearing a black felt of a shape approved by their fathers and grandfathers. Even the straw hat is much in the minority. In the same way as the colored hat, the knee breeches movement is gaining no headway which is apparent. There are, it is true, a few ardent supporters of knee breeches who are loyal enough to wear them in public, but the rest of the men here remain true to their trousers.

A peculiarly significant straw which points to the French franc being as good as stabilized today, is the purchasing, which the German Reichsbank has recommenced, of French Government bills and commercial paper. England and America have been committed to se transactions for some time, but Germany has held back. Franc fluctuations since the war caused the Germans to lose confidence in French paper and bills of this kind. That they have reconsidered the case is acclaimed in France and is taken as meaning that Germany accepts the fact that the franc will remain at its present value of approximately four American cents. It means, too, the end of all foolish talk and speculation about Germany maneuvering to bring about the fall of the franc. It implies that France and Germany are, speaking financially, on very good terms again and are likely to Negotiations are in progress between French film interests and the Spanish Government for the benevolent support of the latter during the production of a Franco-Spanish film "Le Cid," that classic of Pierre Corneille, dramatic poet of the seventeenth century. When completed, it should be one of the big French successes of the Incidentally, the French film industry, like the British, is talking about overhauling its machinery. There are few French films which stand out as exceptional, and the American films are those almost constantly in vogue. Besides, only 8 per cent of the French public goes to the motion picture theaters as against 80 per cent in America. Maurice Quetin, director of the Gaumont Palace in this city, has proposed methods of improving the situation, and if his plans are carried out, more outstanding French films may be expected on the market during 1928.

A dozen houses have made a street. It is the new rue Mallet-Stevens, just opened and said to be the most curious in Paris. It is named after the architect who built the houses. He is a modernist, a geometrician of cubes and concrete. No useless line, is his formula. Maximum air, light, comfort, are his constructional creeds. Despite these agreeable features, not everyone can find the charm of outline which he believes he has put in his taut planes. Nevertheless, Paris has at last actually a street of this type of architecture which has hitherto been known only in models at decorative arts and architectural exhibits. One idea of M. Mallet-Stevens must, however, commend itself to all. Every roof is flat and every roof is a garden, a terrace of flowers and growing things. And each floor has its small terrace, laden at this hour of the year with geraniums and other flowers in bloom

A post card may be delayed, but it need not be lost. An instance has been reported of a post card taking twentythree years to go from one side of Paris to the other. How untrue it would have been to have said that the post card was lost. A mistake undoubtedly occurred somewhere, but it has been rectified as far as possible The post card was mailed in 1903 and has just been delivered to the person for whom it was intended. In these days when the Atlantic can be traversed in thirty-three hours, it is in the nature of a negative wonder that a post card should be 23 years on its two-mile way. However, it finally arrived
